

Introducing Your Microsoft Account

The latest Microsoft update for February 2022 made a significant improvement to Windows. Now from Windows Settings you can see the details of your Microsoft account. Many people who have no idea that they even have a Microsoft account. I can't tell you how much time and money has been wasted trying to unravel the details of someone's Microsoft account. Now everyone will have the access to the first clue to unraveling their Microsoft account: the username/email address the account was registered under.

So we click settings and we see a new menu item on the left.

At the top left of the screen is email address of record. Each item will give relevant information about your Microsoft account when clicked.

I shouldn't have been surprised when, as I was in the middle of writing and creating this article, I noticed something I hadn't seen before.

Click to go to the the next post and experience: The Intel Installer.